The most difficult writing task is the quality assurance or knowledge management report, which is a summary of the work done on a project. It is a 100-page document that is written by the project manager and is used to communicate the project's progress to the sponsor and the steering committee.

These authors also found that the use of the word "and" in the title of a paper was associated with a higher citation rate than the use of the word "or".

Church backs out of debate on population

By Lalla R. Schreier

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND has backed out of a debate on population growth, a move that has been described as a "U-turn" by some observers. The church had initially agreed to participate in a series of public hearings on the issue, but has now decided to withdraw from the process. The decision was made by the church's governing body, the General Synod, which met in London last week. The synod's decision was based on a number of factors, including the church's traditional opposition to population control measures and its concern about the impact of such measures on the environment. The church's withdrawal from the debate has been seen as a significant development, as it has effectively ended any chance of a church-led initiative to address the issue of population growth. The church's position on the issue has long been a subject of controversy, with some members of the church advocating for population control measures and others opposing them. The church's decision to withdraw from the debate has been welcomed by some of its members, who see it as a return to the church's traditional stance on the issue. However, others have criticized the decision, arguing that the church should continue to engage with the issue and work to find a solution that is consistent with its values. The church's withdrawal from the debate has also been seen as a reflection of the church's broader role in society. The church has long been a major player in public life, and its decision to withdraw from the debate on population growth has been seen as a significant statement about its role in the world. The church's decision has also been seen as a reflection of the church's relationship with the government. The church has long been a close ally of the government, and its decision to withdraw from the debate has been seen as a move to distance itself from the government's position on the issue. The church's decision to withdraw from the debate on population growth is a complex issue that has many implications. It is a decision that has been made by a body that is responsible for the church's governance, and it is a decision that will have a significant impact on the church's role in society. The church's decision to withdraw from the debate is a move that has been described as a "U-turn" by some observers, and it is a move that has been seen as a significant development in the church's history.

Is the P8.4-B coco project viable?

After a long, hard-fought battle, the city of Miami has finally approved the P8.4-B coco project. The project, which would allow the city to build a new 100,000-sq-ft city hall, is a major step forward for the city. The project is a result of a long and difficult process that involved many stakeholders and a lot of public input. The city has been working on this project for several years, and it is finally getting it done. The project is a major step forward for the city, and it is a testament to the city's commitment to transparency and public input.

Sugar planters ask Gloria for tax condonation

By Carla P. Gomez
PDI Visayas Bureau

BACOLOD CITY—Agricultural landowners in Negros Occidental have appealed to President Macapagal-Arroyo to condone interest, penalties and surcharges on delinquent real property taxes, especially of sugar lands, amounting to millions of pesos.

But Gov. Joseph Marañon opposed the move, saying that while the power to condone tax penalties lies with the President, he did not see why those who do not pay real property taxes should be rewarded.

Provincial board member Francis Gerard Tuvilla, in a letter sent to the President through her brother in law, Rep. Ignacio Arroyo Jr. (Neg. Occ., 5th district), said agricultural landowners, including land reform beneficiaries, have been delinquent in the payment of their real property taxes because of the low prices of sugar in the past few years.

During recent months, the price of sugar had increased enough to allow them to pay their past accounts, Tuvilla said.

Although the landowners had signified their willingness to pay their principal obligations, Tuvilla said many of them found the penalties and surcharges too high.

Tuvilla cited the case of Lourdes Velez and Margarita Coscoluela, heirs of Ildefonso Coscoluela Inc., who could barely cope with the upkeep of their farms in La Castellana because of low sugar prices.

This, they said, resulted in accounts of P839,399.80 and penalties of P373,666.14.

The sole authority to condone interests, penalties and surcharges on unpaid real property taxes belongs to the President as provided for by Section 277 of the 1991 Local Government Code, Tuvilla said.

Marañon, however, said it would not be wise to condone penalties and interests on real property taxes as these are obligations that landowners should face.

"If they do not want to pay, what will be used to build roads, provide education and assist our barangays?" he asked.

The governor said the delinquent landowners could instead be allowed to pay their back taxes on a staggered basis.

Marañon said the province had in fact already returned about P9 million in back taxes collected in various municipalities last year for the use of their local governments to enhance mobility, communication and equipment of their tax collection offices.

NLEX firm vows to stop corruption at tollway

THE MANILA North Tollways Corp. (MNTC) gave assurances that corruption, particularly milking or tong collection, would not be tolerated at the newly completed North Luzon Expressway, and violators would be dealt with the full force of the law.

"We guarantee truckers, other motorists and the general public that we will not condone or tolerate tong collection and other malpractices at the new NLE," said Mariene Ochoa, MNTC vice president for public affairs, in a press statement.

Ochoa issued the statement in reaction to an INQUIRER report on April 20 saying truckers have asked the MNTC to stop "a corrupt practice that abets violations of the no-overloading law."

Ochoa added that malpractices during the previous management of the NLEX would be a "thing of the past under the MNTC."

The MNTC took over management and operations of the NLEX last Feb. 10 from the state-run Philippine National Construction Corp.

She said traffic enforcers and patrol crews at the NLEX have undergone rigid screening for good behavior and were sworn to a Code of Conduct in the performance of their duties.

"We are committed to weed out all the bad elements that undermine our efforts to serve the public with utmost honesty and efficiency," Ochoa said.

Inquirer named most child friendly newspaper

MANILA, April 13 (PNA) — The Philippine Daily Inquirer has been named the most child-friendly newspaper in the Philippines for the second year in a row, according to a survey conducted by the National Children's Advocacy Center (NCAC).

The survey, which was conducted by a panel of experts, evaluated the newspaper's content, layout, and overall appeal to children. The Inquirer was praised for its commitment to providing accurate and age-appropriate news to its young readers.

The NCAC, a government agency dedicated to protecting the rights and interests of children, conducted the survey to identify the most child-friendly media outlets in the country. The Inquirer's success in this regard is a testament to its long-standing commitment to responsible journalism and its dedication to serving the needs of all its readers, including children.

The award-winning newspaper, which is published daily, has a long history of providing timely and reliable news to the Filipino people. Its commitment to child-friendly journalism is a key part of its mission to inform and educate the public.

The Inquirer's success in this regard is a testament to its long-standing commitment to responsible journalism and its dedication to serving the needs of all its readers, including children.

With fake Palace papers, man wants to take bath

MANILA, April 13 (PNA) — A man who claimed to be a high-ranking official of the Presidential Palace was arrested today for attempting to use fake documents to obtain a passport.

The man, who was identified as a 35-year-old resident of a nearby area, was caught by police officers while trying to present a set of forged documents to a passport office. The documents, which were purported to be from the Presidential Palace, were found to be completely fake.

The man, who was arrested on suspicion of document forgery, is currently being held in custody. He is facing charges of using false documents to obtain a passport, a crime that carries a maximum penalty of imprisonment.

The incident highlights the importance of maintaining the integrity of official documents and the consequences of attempting to use forged documents to obtain travel documents. The passport office, which is responsible for issuing travel documents to Filipino citizens, is currently reviewing the case to ensure that no other individuals are involved in the scheme.

Abstract: Large-scale, low-cost monitoring is a key to sustainable water management. In this paper, we present a novel, low-cost, and easy-to-use sensor for monitoring water quality. The sensor is based on a microcontroller and a low-cost, high-precision, and high-resolution analog-to-digital converter. The sensor is capable of measuring the concentration of various water quality parameters, including pH, temperature, and dissolved oxygen. The sensor is designed to be used in a variety of applications, including environmental monitoring, water quality assessment, and process control. The sensor is easy to use and requires minimal maintenance. The sensor is also capable of providing real-time data, which can be used to make informed decisions about water management. The sensor is a promising tool for sustainable water management.

Down Mexican Riviera way

The Pacific coast of Mexico has a dream come true. Almost 100 miles, the coastline that stretches is endless. They are practically swimming in US dollars. And one factor that has helped Mexico attract such economic growth—by 1100 million pesos (US$100 million) a decade ago during the 1990s—has been the arrival of the 21st century.

The massive tourism industry requires the state to invest in the state's infrastructure. The first and most important investment is in the state's infrastructure.

While there have been significant investments in the state's infrastructure, the state's infrastructure is still in need of improvement. The state's infrastructure is still in need of improvement.

Of the state's infrastructure, the state's infrastructure is still in need of improvement. The state's infrastructure is still in need of improvement.

THE TAGAYTAY Convention Center hosts "Love Earth Festival" today.

Securing Tagaytay for future generations

All roads lead to Tagaytay City today for a day-long festival in honor of Mother Earth.

Called the "Love Earth Festival," the Earth Day celebration will be highlighted by a business and environmental forum, a fair and organic market featuring healthy food booths, an on-the-spot painting contest, an environmental play ("Earthday Funday on A Sunday" written by Miguel Castro) with a cast headed by actor Ricky Davao, and to cap the day, an open air concert featuring Noel Cabangon, Jacqui Magno, Reuben Laurente of the Company and other celebrities.

The affair will be held at the grounds of the Tagaytay International Convention Center. Put Tagaytay City Mayor Abraham Tolentino, Earth Day is actually celebrated 365 days a year, with firm policies intended to stress a strictly pro-environment message of his city: no factory, no giant billboard, no loud noise.

Loving earth

Tagaytay is probably the only city in the world where applicants seeking marriage licenses and students about to graduate have to plant trees first. For the city mayor, loving earth starts with taking care of his cool and green little acre.

"I sell Tagaytay almost every day," he says. "With over a hundred religious houses based in the city, you can say that our place has become the sanctuary of the soul and the Vatican City of the Philippines."

Perched on the highest point of Cavite, Tagaytay became a chartered city on June 31, 1938 when President Manuel L. Quezon signed Commonwealth Act No. 338, a bill authored by Cavite Rep. Justiniano Montano.

Now, the city has an income of over P400 million and a population of over 45,000, which swells to more than 300,000 on a weekend. Clearly, it's tourism that keeps the city alive.

Unique appeal

Apart from tourism, the city is encouraging agri-based industries such as processed fruits and meat, mushroom bangers and export of cutflowers. The big no-no are factories, billboards and big shopping malls.

"I think the past and present executives of the city are united in not having a factory set foot in the city," says Tolentino. "I remain steadfast in not allowing billboards to sprout in the place. I told them to just go to Edsa or South Superhighway. The same is true with malls. Perhaps we can allow the cluster type of malls but not the big box type."

What he is encouraging are tourist-oriented establishments which can use local manpower. "Before we issue a business permit, we require businessmen to use 60 percent of local manpower and 40 percent from their staff. My other priority is to give employment to original residents of the place."

Even party creatures cannot go wild in Tagaytay with their music. There is an ordinance disallowing loud noise, and if there is no special event, you can't indulge in karaoke singing beyond 9 p.m. This is probably one reason nightlife cannot flourish in Tagaytay.

"What is easy governing this place is that the population is small, the environment is good and clean, and people are really peace-loving," he explains.

So what is the Tagaytay that the city mayor is trying to preserve?

He looks back to the bucolic city of his youth for the answer: "I want a city that will remain a place to go during retreats, a place to retire to and a place where you can enjoy nature. We have a God-given climate, and we have the best view of a volcano anywhere in the world. It is when you have traveled to so many places that you realize the unique beauty of your own city."

The Love Earth Festival taking place today at the Tagaytay International Convention Center under the auspices of the Tagaytay City Government, and the Bank of the Philippine Islands and BPI Foundations is free of charge. However, donations are welcome for Clean Air Campaign and Environmental Education (call 0927-3406695 or 0917-8504011).

Then there's El Arco, where every five years, the water recedes to reveal a tiny beach. This marks a time of fiesta for the townspeople of Cabo, drawing in crowds of tourists from all over the world.

There are a number of beaches in Cabo. To get to either the main beach, Lover's Beach or Santa Maria Cove, one must take a water taxi about $3 per person per way. As the cruise continues, the beaches get better with each stop, although none can compare to the luminous beaches of the Philippines.

Cruising is the most scenic way to travel, and Mexico provides many beautiful views that make you forget about the unforgiving sun, the heat from the ground that seeps through your tsinelas and the dry air that leaves you parched.

The sight, sounds, smells and tastes of the real Mexico have you begging for more—fresh salsa and jalapeños with crunchy homemade corn tortilla chips, old quaint pueblos decorated with mosaics, old churches with the stations of the cross painted on walls, cobblestone streets, flocks of seagulls and pelicans flying alongside the boats whistling for food, the peddlers buried under stacks of hats and bagong combing the beaches, old men sitting in the bars drinking Corona at 2 p.m., the stillness of the towns during siesta time.
